Burrito City was created by hand code. Adding images, text, and page navigation to make the website easy access and straightforward.

The logic and design of Burrito City was created while I was eating a beefy five layer burrito. Then thought of showing the many different types of burritos for those who are unfamiliar.

Problems I encountered were a decent amount. I had trouble linking the pages together, getting the images in my code looking neat and presentable. As well as, how time consuming it was to do the survey page. I overcame these problems by looking up youtube videos and notes. These tools helped me find what and how to make my code correct.
